CLOSEUP GLIMPSES

4 Playing "For Keeps," and
One Playing "Hard
To Get"

This is the first article of a series providing intimate, close-up glimpses of the leading presidential candidates — the men who seem at this time to be in front of the field for the nominations that will be made at the Republican and Democratic conventions in Chicago this July.

How much do we really know about these men—one of whom probably will be guiding our national destiny beginning next year? We think we know their politics, but what do we know of the candidates as people—as simple human beings? Do they like children? Do they play cards, or drink? Are they golf addicts? Do they help with the dishes at home? Just what kind of men are they?

These articles, by one of America's great feature writers, noted reporter, columnist, author Inez Robb, give the interesting — and sometimes surprising — answers.

"There's always room at the top" is an adage with which no presidential aspirant ever quarrels in an election year.

And while it is true that the top itself may resemble the great open spaces, the escalators leading upward in 1952 are so crowded with presidential candidates, favorite sons and dark horses that a traffic cop is indicated to regulate the jam.

Political wiseacres count that day lost whose low descending sun fails to set yet another candidate announcing his availability for the most powerful political office on

2 Contests Conducted
With "Clean-Up" Drive

One of the phases of the current "Clean-Up-Paint-Up-Fix-Up" campaign has gotten under way in Bristol borough and Bristol township schools with the scholars in junior and senior high school competing to determine who will win the prizes for the best essay and the most appealing poster.

Judging in both cases will take place during the week of May 19th and prizes will be presented the winners by David Hertzler, honorary chairman of the essay and poster committees; and Francis O'Boyle, general chairman of the clean up committee.

The prize for the most appealing poster will be a $15 set of paints and brushes. This prize was donated by the Kenray Sign Co. The judging will be done by Paul Barrett, Esq., Dr. William Goldfarb, John Gontar, Miss Ralph Proud and Mrs. Herbert Smoyer.

The prize for the best essay will be a pen and pencil set equal in value to the paint set. This prize was donated by O'Boyle Ice Cream Co. The judges for the contest will be the Rev. Edward G. Yeomans, Mrs. Paul Barrett and Mrs. William Levinson.

To Discuss Industry's
Part In Development

The part industry is playing in the vast development taking place in the Delaware river valley will be discussed by top-ranking executives of the area at the mid-year conference of the Greater Philadelphia-South Jersey Council in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Monday, May 19th.

The conference is being held in connection with ceremonies to be conducted by the Philadelphia section of the American Society of Civil Engineers to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the ASCE. Thomas Buckley, consulting engineer of the GP-SJ council and former Director of Public Works of Philadelphia, is chairman of the ASCE celebration committee, and he also will preside at the panel session on industry that the council will sponsor as the highlight of its mid-year conference.

Speakers to be heard during the GP-SJ panel session will include Earl Yerkes, engineer of equipment, the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania; R. G. Rinecliff, president, Philadelphia Electric Co.; James M. Symes, executive vice-president, Pennsylvania Railroad, and H. Thomas Hallowell, Jr., president, Standard Pressed Steel Co., Philadelphia.

Dr. James Creese, president of Drexel Institute of Technology, will be the principal speaker at the opening session, beginning at 2 p. m.

Concluding the program will be a dinner at 6:30 p. m., with Dr. Roy K. Marshall, educational director of Stations WFIL and WFIL-TV, and Carlton S. Proctor, consulting engineer of New York and president of the ASCE, the principal speakers.

SENATOR MARTIN WARNS NATION OF BEING "PUSHED INTO A DICTATORSHIP OF A PRESIDENT WHOSE POWER TO ACT IS UNLIMITED"

(Special to the Courier)

WASHINGTON, May 12 — The recent take-over of the steel industry by President Truman was "a new and dangerous departure in our government" which brings the American people to a crossroad in their history where they must choose whether to remain a republic or allow themselves to be "pushed into a dictatorship of a President whose power to act is unlimited," U. S. Senator Edward Martin of Pennsylvania declared in a radio report over the week-end.

The President "takes the position that he can seize the steel mills, the coal mines, or anything else without any grant of authority from the representatives of the people, the Congress of the United States, if he, alone, decides it is in the public interest," Senator Martin declared.

"For the first time in the history

DISCUSSION TO BE
ON HUMAN RELATIONSClarence E. Pickett Will Be
Main Speaker; Three
Are on Panel

MONDAY, 19TH OF MAY

A human relations council is being organized for this part of Pennsylvania, to be known as "Human Relations Council of Bucks county." Representatives of various religious groups of the county, who recently set up an organizing committee for such, plan a panel discussion for Monday, May 19th, in the Pennsylvania high school, Makerville and Big Oak roads, near Yardley.

With Richard McFeely, principal of George School, Newtown, as the moderator, Clarence E. Pickett will be the main speaker. Mr. Pickett is secretary emeritus of the American Friends Service Committee.

Panel discussion leaders will be: Drayton Bryant, housing; John D. Dougherty, employment; John Barriss, of Bristol high school staff, education.

The Rev. E. Clarendon Hyde, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Hulmeville, is serving as convener of the organizing committee.

The session will get underway at eight p. m.

The leaders in the movement will be to seek solution to the many perplexing problems of our vastly expanding community on an inter-denominational and inter-racial basis. In order to explore further the necessary or desirable steps which might be undertaken, all interested groups and organizations are asked to have at least two members participate in the program."

THE PAPPAPAIN FUNERAL

Rites for Basil Pappajain, who was found dead in bed at his Mill street home Saturday morning are scheduled for tomorrow at 12 noon, from the funeral home of John C. Black, 214 Cedar street. Further service will be held at 1:30 in St. George Greek Orthodox Church, 103 Jackson street, Trenton, N. J. Burial is to be made in Bristol Cemetery. Friends may call this evening.

of the United States, the Department of Justice, on behalf of the Administration, declared bluntly that there is no limit on the power of the president. The only countries in which there is no limit upon the powers of the executive are dictatorships."

Senator Martin recently won the endorsement of the Republican Party, at the spring primary, for re-election to the U. S. Senatorship. His address follows in full:

"I want to recall an incident in American history which has a direct bearing on recent developments in our government.

"It occurred in our own City of Philadelphia in September, 1787. The Constitutional Convention had finished its long and difficult labors after four months of debate and discussion.

"It is related that when Benjamin Franklin stepped out into State House Square he was approached by a woman, who asked:

"What kind of government have you given us?"

"Dr. Franklin, the wisest and greatest of all Pennsylvania statesmen, replied:

"A Republic, if you can keep it."

"Since that day there have been many times of grave crisis in the life of our Republic.

"There have been times when the American people have been called upon to pay a great price in blood and treasure to keep their Republic.

"In our own time we have fought two World Wars in defense of the Arrangements are in charge of John C. Black, funeral director.

To Be Given Hearing, Due To An Auto Accident

A passenger car belonging to a Bristol, R. D. No. 3, man, was damaged approximately $60 early yesterday morning, when involved in a hit and run accident on Trevose road.

Edward J. Wurster, Newportville road, Bristol, R. D. No. 3, according to police, was operating a 1949 sedan on Trevose road, near Taylor road, at 12:50 a. m., yesterday morning, when another vehicle travelling in the same direction, passed the Wurster machine, side-swiping the left front door and continued on, police said.

Police report Morton Dyer, Jr., 22, Newportville, was apprehended at his home, yesterday morning, as the driver of the machine that struck the Wurster vehicle. It is reported Dyer turned off the lights of the vehicle to avoid identification.

Bensalem police chief, George Rentz, investigated.

A hearing will be held tonight.

Detroit, Mich., was founded in 1701.

Former Grocer Dies
At His Croydon Home

CROYDON, May 12—At the age of 85 years, Joseph Scott died at his home, 1632 Fourth avenue, yesterday. He has been a local resident for 25 years, and for 18 years was engaged in the grocery business.

Pleased With Support
Given Aeromodelers

Bristol Aeromodelers members are well pleased with public support they have received for their May 30th model flying circus.

The flying field, recently reconditioned by Joseph Haines who donated his services, is said to be in excellent condition. Bristol Exchange Club and its model club committee, Archibald Dalrymple, Thomas Stricker and Sheridan Metz, are giving the model club help with many contest details.

Local businessmen, along with a number of model aircraft parts manufacturers, have donated prizes. Among some of the choice ones are: model engines, donated by Bristol Hobby Shop; airplane ride, Engle flying service; camera, Nichols Photo Service; and dozens of model plane kits.

Work at Levittown Project
Is at A Standstill Today

LEVITTOWN, May 12—Construction work was at a standstill here today on the Levittown housing project. Whether the delay is due to the weather or to the A. F. L. pickets could not be determined.

The pickets marched back and forth in front of Levitt property for the third straight day. The picket line was orderly and many of the men were drinking hot coffee that was being distributed.

The strike is said to be in protest of Levitt building practices and several hundred building and construction trades council men have joined in the demonstration.

The State Police Say:

Riding on the outside or rear of a motor vehicle while such vehicle is in motion is forbidden under the Vehicle Code. Persons on bicycles, roller skates, or sleds are forbidden to hold fast to or hitch on to any vehicle. Drivers of motor vehicles, and owners of such vehicles, if present, are violating the law if they permit anyone to do any of these acts.

Reading Co. Permitted to Abandon 19-Mile Spur Service

Philadelphia—The State Superior Court today upheld a Public Utility Commission order permitting the Reading Railroad to abandon rail service on a 19-mile spur between Haboro and New Hope.

The decision by Judge Chester H. Rhodes allows the carrier to substitute bus service on a nearly parallel line with the trackage.

Judge Rhodes ruled that a commuters' committee which appealed the PUC order was not a legal entity. He said he did not make his ruling on those grounds, however.

The jurist took cognizance, he said, of the Reading's report that it was losing some $43,000 a year on the Haboro-New Hope line.

Feasterville Folk Act to Oppose Turnpike

Norristown—Attorneys for a group of residents of Feasterville, Pa., will take court action in an effort to prevent construction of the proposed 33.4-mile extension to the Pennsylvania Turnpike which they said would "cut Feasterville in half."

Robert C. Hagood, chairman of a residents committee, announced that the Norristown law firm of Wood and Hauser, had been engaged to oppose the construction. The firm is readying an appeal for an injunction forbidding the Turnpike Commission to follow the presently outlined route. Hagood said Gov. John S. Fine has turned down an appeal for an alternate route north of Feasterville.

Thieves Get $4,000 Loot in Philadelphia

Philadelphia—Police searched today for burglars who took loot valued at more than $4,000 from homes in various sections of Philadelphia over the week-end.

General Dodd Treated with "Utmost Respect"

Seoul—Brig. Gen. Francis T. Dodd revealed tonight his Red captors at the Kojie Island war prisoner camp treated him with "utmost respect" but told him his life would be "forfeited" if Allied tanks and troops attacked. The former commandant of the Kojie prisoner stockades said the Reds originally had planned to keep him as a hostage for 10 days.

Miss Genevieve L. Tilley
Is Bride of F. W. Koby

EDDINGTON, May 12 — With the Rev. Stanley A. Powell officiating, the marriage of Miss Genevieve L. Tilley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Tilley, Sr., Cornwells Heights, and Mr. Frank W. Koby, Cornwells Heights was solemnized in Christ Episcopal Church, here, Saturday afternoon. The wedding hour was four o'clock.

Serving as maid of honor was Miss Agnes Weikel, Andalusia; and as bridesmaids, Miss Virginia Leinauer, Bridgewater, and Mrs. George Ashton, Cornwells Heights.

Mr. Koby, son of Mrs. Bertha Koby, Philadelphia, had as his best man Mr. Samuel Morrison, Jr., Andalusia; while the ushers were Messrs. Quenton Bristol, Bensalem twp., and George Ashton, Cornwells Heights.

The scene of the reception was the Rose Mar ballroom, Holmesburg.

Upon their return from a week spent in the Pocono mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Koby will make their home in Philadelphia.

Croydon, Struck by Car
On Route 13

RAN IN FRONT OF CAR

A ten-year-old Croydon boy, Frederick W. Gunthor, 2606 First avenue, suffered a fractured right leg and multiple abrasions when he was struck by an automobile on old Route 13, south of Mill street, yesterday at four p. m.

According to the police report, Henry R. Jolly, Jr., 24, of 650 Court C, Terrace II, Bristol Township, was going west on Route 13 when the boy appeared from behind the P. R. R. bridge and ran in front of the car. Jolly was accompanied by his wife, Nancy, and a friend, Florence Bonsted, 4217 Loring street, Philadelphia.

The injured boy was taken to the Harriman Hospital by the Bristol Blood Donors. The Blood Donors then transferred him to the St. Francis Hospital in Trenton by order of Dr. Kramer.

Bristol Borough Policemen Chance and Faragalli investigated the accident.

FIREMEN ANSWER CALLS

Bristol firemen extinguished two fires on Saturday and one yesterday. The vines on the side of the home of John Gallagher, 701 Pine street, caught fire at 1:15 p. m., Saturday. No damage was reported. A short circuit in a refrigerator started a fire at the Harriman Food Center, Monroe and Farragut, Saturday at 8:45 p. m. No estimate of damage was available. A street light pole on Cedar street, between Dorrance and Penn streets, caught fire at 1:20 a. m., yesterday morning, and was extinguished.

GROUP VISITS HOSPITAL

Members of the Bristol Chapter of American War Mothers visited Valley Forge Veterans Hospital on Friday afternoon where they served 70 patients with homemade cake and ice cream and each one received a package containing toilet articles.

CHURCH AT EDGELYEdgely Community Church
Officially Becomes "Pilgrim Presbyterian"

AN EVENTFUL DAY

Elders Are Elected, and Installation Ceremony is Conducted

EDGELY, May 12—Sunday was an eventful day for Edgely Community Church when it became officially the Pilgrim Presbyterian Church. Elders were elected and members were accepted into the Presbyterian faith. The Rev. John Henry Strook, presiding chairman of the committee on strategy, conducted the services.

The service held three o'clock marked acceptance of members into the Presbyterian faith. The Rev. Mr. Strook welcomed the members into the church and said they are "not only members of this church but a part of the Presbyterian church of the U. S. A." A group of 79 men and women were listed as charter members of the newly-organized church. The Rev. Ernest N. Feind, moderator, Presbytery of Philadelphia, closed the service.

A service at four o'clock, officially organized the church and made it the Pilgrim Presbyterian Church of Edgely. Elders were elected as follows: three years, Lawrence D. MacSherry, and John W. Conyers; for two years, Tobias J. Swope and Percy Brown; one year, Thomas Brown and Jacob DeWilde.

The Rev. Mr. Strook led members in reading the covenant as follows: "We the undersigned persons desire to be constituted and organized as a church which is to be known as Pilgrim Presbyterian Church. We do covenant and agree to walk together as disciples of Jesus Christ in a church relation according to the provisions of the constitution of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of

THE BLUNT NOSED BEAST

The huge aircraft carrier Wasp, which ran down and sank its small escorting vessel, the Hobson, in mid-Atlantic, is moored in New York harbor. Vestiges of the tragedy, which claimed 176 lives among the Hobson's crew, are all too apparent. A slanting gash in her bow is a grim memorial to the ship which didn't return.

It now appears that while all interest was centered in the fate of the crewmen of the smaller ship, the Wasp, too, was in grave danger. Greatest peril stemmed from the weather, which threw low visibility, high seas, and gale-like winds at the wounded carrier like Sunday punches. Only prodigious feats of seamanship and use of all orthodox, and some unorthodox, damage control tactics saved her.

Excerpts from the ship's log, released by the Navy, reveal the mixture of tragedy, comedy, heroism and drudgery implicit in a disaster at sea. An anonymous deck officer scribbled in the rough log that the Wasp was a "blunt nosed beast" wandering about in a series of drunken zigzags to make her ride better and to make the repair task in the steel caverns behind the bow easier. Sometimes she fled the waves stern first. Her best speed toward New York was 10 knots.

The damaged Wasp will be in repair for many months. Meanwhile the personnel of the two vessels will painstakingly reconstruct the sea tragically for the edification of a naval court. The wounds in the steel hull and in the minds of the Hobson's survivors will gradually heal as time dulls the sharper edges of the disaster.

SCIENCE WAS HIS BEAT

There was a time in the annals of American journalism when the man who reported crime, scandal and conflict was the star of the news room.

But within the past 25 years a new writer has risen in importance—the science reporter. And his value on newspaper staffs has become greater as science in all its branches has developed new ways of living, new methods of righting disease, and, of course, new styles for waging wars.

A pioneer in this branch of American journalism was Howard W. Blakeslee, who died the other day.

Without benefit of formal training in science, Mr. Blakeslee—whose dispatches were read by millions—had learned how to grasp the knowledge of the scientists and translate it into everyday language for the public.

He showed that the basic honesty of a good reporter and a desire to know what is happening in the world are more important than a string of degrees in bringing accurate news of science to the public. Some of the outstanding scientific societies of the nation heaped honors upon him—a layman who helped people to understand the impact of science.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

(By Courier Staff Member)

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Jan. 7, 1904. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

HULMEVILLE—A. Comly has opened an oyster saloon in the property formerly occupied by Hibbs & Brown.

ATTLEBORO—The weavers at Markgraf's are out on a strike.

ANDALUSIA—We do not pretend that the Chapel of Andalusia is as beautiful as Solomon's Temple, but it was built for the same purpose, and for all we know there may be as many angels in it—at any rate it is worth going there to see.

OXFORD VALLEY—The following is the program of the mortgage burning to be held in the Chapel on Sunday afternoon, January 10, at 2:30. Organ Voluntary, Miss Bertha Schaffer; Hymn, "I Love Thy Kingdom Lord," Apostles' Creed; Invocation; Scripture Reading; Music, Male Quartette; History of Oxford Valley C. E. Chapel, A. L. Spencer; Music, Male Quartette; Anniversary Sermon, Rev. O. J. Randall; Music, Male Quartette; Offering, (Organ Voluntary—Miss Bertha Schaffer); Mortgage Burning; Closing Prayer and Benediction. Everyone is cordially invited to this service.

John Shull, who formerly conducted the Bristol News Agency, is now one of the proprietors of a popular restaurant on Vine street, above Eighth, Philadelphia.

Howard McMullen has enlisted as plumber on board the United States transport ship "McClellan," which is now in New York harbor waiting sailing orders. Mr. McMullen about a year ago, returned from a long voyage on the "McClellan" after having visited South America, Honolulu, the Philippines and other points.

The skating pond provided by the trolley company near Croydon soon caught public favor. On New Year's Day the company carried 450 people to the place. That night the Eddington band furnished music and the merry skaters had a fine time, the pond being brightly illuminated with electric lights. When the skating is good the public is made aware of the fact by placards on each end of the trolley cars.

At the annual meeting of the male members of the M. E. Church held in the church parlor on last Friday evening John K. Young,

Harvey S. Rue and David O. Taylor were elected trustees to serve for three years. After the adjournment of the male members meeting, the board of trustees re-organized for the ensuing year by electing C. M. Foster, president; J. W. Wright, secretary; and J. K. Young, treasurer.

Postmaster Minster, of Bristol, had a series of accidents at his home last week that caused him to believe that he was under the spell of some evil genius. On New Year's Day Mr. Minster went to the cellar to attend to the furnace and placed a lighted lamp on a shelf. After giving the heater the required attention he went upstairs and forgot the lamp until noticing a volume of smoke pouring up through the parlor carpet. Investigation revealed the fact that the lamp had set fire to the boards in the ceiling of the cellar. The incipient blaze was extinguished without causing much damage. The next day, while family was at dinner, a servant girl fell over an oil stove that was burning in the hall on the second floor upsetting the stove and causing the burning oil to spread over the floor. With the aid of blankets the fire was put out after destroying carpets, rugs, curtains, etc. The following day Mrs. Minster met with a painful accident in the bath room, where some boards had been removed by the plumber from the floor, by stepping in the open space and breaking through the bath and plaster of the ceiling below. In order to be extracted from her painful position, a young lady who was at the house at the time had to go to the floor below and, standing on a table, break the laths away and push Mrs. Minster's foot up through the ceiling. On Sunday the water pipes in the house bursted in the bath room, flooding the place and damaging the room below. The genial postmaster rarely gets ruffled but he came to the conclusion that he had enough excitement for one week.

And what the union wanted was not what the President or Wilson thought it should get. It was a bigger raise in pay and a tighter lid on steel prices. The chore of satisfying the union was handed to Nathan Feinsinger, chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, who had been making telephone calls to the President via the back door at the same time Wilson and Mr. Truman were agreeing face to face on what the union should get. "WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1952,
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 12

The Defense Department in Washington is assisting President Truman in the imposition of a labor government on the United States.

None of us has been cited for a labor government, such as voters in England recently shook off their backs, but this hasn't deterred Mr. Truman. He is doing it by executive fiat. And Defense Department officials are grubbing around in politics and labor-management disputes, including the steel plant seizure, at the behest of the President and the little would-be dictators who advise him at the White House.

The Defense Department was established by Congress to handle military matters. Its top civilian officials are responsible for general administration over-all policy. Nowhere in the legislation which set up the department is there any authorization for officials to serve as political operators for the President.

When Mr. Truman decreed that the last nine months of national policy-making under his administration would be dictated by organized labor, he expected and got total cooperation from the defense department. Three recent incidents prove it. There are countless others, but the three are indicative of the President's conviction that leaders of C. I. O., the A. F. of L. and sundry other union bosses know what is best for the U. S. A.

For instance, in announcing a new defense contract for a Detroit automobile plant, the defense department first cleared the contract with Walter Reuther, head of the C. I. O. Auto Workers. Reuther conferred with Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense, and then left the Pentagon to announce that the defense department was awarding the contract to a firm with which his union holds a contract. Apparently, this was the media by which the company learned that its bid for the contract had been accepted.

Reuther stated that he would continue to confer with defense department officials from time to time on the placement of contracts for war materials.

Another incident of even more pertinence occurred at the time Charles E. Wilson quit as National Defense Mobilizer. Wilson didn't say so in so many words, but he implied that Mr. Truman double crossed him nine ways from Sunday. He said that he had an agreement with the President to try for a labor-management compromise in the steel wage dispute. But he said he had no sooner returned to Washington after talking to the President in Key West, than C. I. O. President Philip Murray or "one of his cohorts" called Mr. Truman and set him straight on what the union wanted.

And what the union wanted was not what the President or Wilson thought it should get. It was a bigger raise in pay and a tighter lid on steel prices. The chore of satisfying the union was handed to Nathan Feinsinger, chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, who had been making telephone calls to the President via the back door at the same time Wilson and Mr. Truman were agreeing face to face on what the union should get. Feinsinger is a long time foe of the Taft-Hartley Labor Law, which may be one reason why Mr. Truman ducked using it to help settle the steel dispute.

A third indication of defense department and White House kowtowing to labor occurred during the recent threat of a steel strike. Nathan Witt, described on numerous occasions as a communist, who is currently a legal advisor to Copper Producing Unions, was bowed in and out of the Pentagon as though the fate of the nation hinged on his frowns.

All in all it adds up to a labor government of the U. S. A. whether we like it or not. The union bosses, including communist lawyers, are calling the turn now and will be for another nine months. Let's hope it ends there, but if they keep on at the present pace it probably will be too late to rectify the damage.

After all, there are a few other wise men in America besides Reuther and Murray and the fumbling boss of the A. F. of L., William Green. But Mr. Truman doesn't think so, hence we'll have to take it until he trots back to Missouri for a long vacation.

America. We promise to maintain this church by our attendance at its service, our support of its work, our gifts, our efforts, and our prayers, and to seek in its fellowship to glorify the name and further the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The Rev. Mr. Feind asked members of the committee for the election of the elders if any rules had been set up. Mrs. J. DeWilde, reporting for the committee, stated that the elders were to be elected for a term of three years and could not succeed themselves; also that it would be on the rotary system.

The Rev. John K. Lynn, stated clerk, Presbytery of Philadelphia, conducted the election for the six elders. Then the Rev. William F. Wefer, D. D., executive secretary, Presbytery of Phila., conducted the ordination service for the elders, and installed them.

The prayer of dedication was read by the Rev. Edward G. Yeomans, pastor of Bristol Presbyterian Church, after which the Rev. Mr. Feind pronounced the benediction. Anna B. Smith was pianist for the service. Elders C. R. Kroekel, vice moderator, Presbytery of Phila., was also in attendance.

The young people of the church had painted the edifice and resurfaced the floors. The following were accepted in as charter members:

On confession of faith: Miss Mary Dewsnap, Miss Marie Dewsnap, Clayton Kay, Howard E. Lovett, Miss Mary E. Robinson, Kenneth Worthington.

Aspirants For Presidency Fill 1952 Escalators

earth. As this is written, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D) Minn., and Sen. Brien McMahon (D) Conn., are the latest to bare their breasts to the lightning.

Minnesota's and Connecticut's favorite sons are Johnny-come-late-lies in the field, in which nine "major" candidates are already actively engaged either on their own or by proxy.

By convention time, now less than two months off, it's possible someone whose name hasn't been mentioned will be right up there grabbing for the White House door knob.

But that's something no one can know. Without indulging in guessing games or stabs-in-the-dark, this much is apparent now:

Reaching for the GOP top are "Mr. Republican", Sen. Robert A. Taft, and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Panting on their heels are Gov. Earl Warren of California, Republican vice-presidential nominee in 1948, and Harold E. Stassen, the perennial Republican bridesmaid.

Both Gov. Warren's and Mr. Stassen's last best hope is that Sen. Taft and Gen. Eisenhower may so firmly deadlock the GOP convention early in July that one or the other will have a chance to grab the ball and make a touchdown.

Four men are playing for keeps in the Democratic race, and one is playing hard to get. Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, the crime buster, is out in front, but he is making his point the hard way, without the support of the Democratic party machine and over the opposition of President Truman, who controls that machine.

Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia, Sen. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma and W. Averell Harriman, director of mutual security, are in there pitching their best for the nomination.

Harriman, who has been a high echelon trouble-shooter for both the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, is a recent entry. He entered with the blessing and a playful shove from Mr. Truman after Gov. Adlai Ewing Stevenson of Illinois, the President's first and real choice as his successor, said in a loud, flat voice that he would not accept the Democratic nomination.

But hope springs eternal, and some powerful Democrats, including Jake Arvey, Democratic boss of Illinois, refuse to take Stevenson's "no" as final. Despite his very real and apparently sincere refusal of the crown, important factions in the party still hope the Illinois governor can be drafted.

These are the avowed candidates, including Gov. Stevenson, who has avowed that he isn't.

Just to the rear of these nine, favorite sons and dark horses crowd the escalators leading to the top. They are going along for the ride in the desperate hope that a convention deadlock, a political deal, a smoke-filled room or an emotional upheaval (remember Wendell Willkie!) will give them a chance at the grand jackpot or the consolation prize, i.e. the vice-presidency.

The most distinguished dark horse of them all is President Truman himself. Just as some Democratic leaders refuse to forsake the hope that Adlai Stevenson will finally submit to a draft, so other equally perspicacious leaders believe the President will see his political duty and do it, if the national convention is otherwise unable to come up with a winner, or a reasonable facsimile.

The President has said "no" in plain and forceful English. Gov. Stevenson has done likewise. But there are men who refuse to take "no" for an answer, and they could be right in either case if the chips are down and the Democratic party is in dire straits for a candidate with a fighting chance.

Kentucky's favorite son and veep, "Dear Alben" Barkley, despite his age, is still willing to make the supreme sacrifice for his party and head the ticket in '52, the smoke-room Barkleys willin'.

On the Republican escalator, Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur's breath is hot on the neck of the leading contenders. MacArthur has made it plain he is not a candidate. But if the Taft-Eisenhower struggle should lead to a stalemate, the MacArthur adherents are certain to make themselves heard and felt at the Republican convention.

However, it is the Democratic convention that is wide-open for the first time in twenty years, and the escalator is packed with such favorite sons as Senators McMahon and Humphrey; Gov. G. Mennen ("Soapy") Williams of Michigan, Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois, Gov. Paul A. Dever of Massachusetts and Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio.

There is even talk of a possible end-run by two old-line Democratic party stalwarts, the one and only James A. Farley of New York, king maker and former postmaster general, and Gov. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina.

And the end is not yet. Between now and July, other favorite sons will come forward and other dark horses will enter the stake race.

Any little American boy can grow up to be a presidential candidate. In a presidential year, everybody wants to get into the act. And frequently does.

Are The People "Too Dumb"?

ized the American people. It is stultifying in the extreme, this business of mass bribery of the electorate, this proposition of robbing tomorrow's children to buy votes for schemers and demagogues today.

It has contaminated thinking to the point where countless persons publicly support untruths which they know in their hearts to be contemptible as well as hazardous.

The spending capacity of the New Dealers has been incredibly vast. The sheer weight of the dollars involved, together with the rich store of high positions and other preferments, has bedazzled public-minded persons of all parties.

Whenever the New Dealers have been fearful that the use of their incredibly large patronage inside their own party would not be sufficient to re-elect them, they have been singularly successful in undermining their opponents by finding fellow-travelers in the Republican Party.

It was said with great truth, for example, that the late Senator Vandenberg, a stalwart Republican who caved in before the New Deal power, did more for the Democrats in Congress than Truman and all his White House lobby were able to do.

Part of the strategy of the New Dealers in the present critical year, a strategy in which the Midas-like wealth of their political contact-men is a big factor, is a deliberate effort to influence the Republican choice.

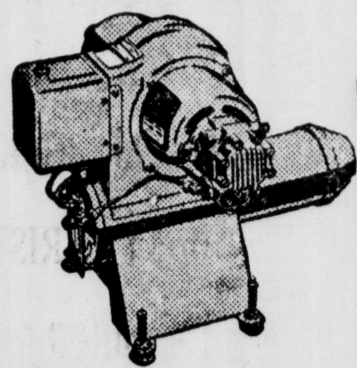

Whatever they may say in public, the New Deal politicians would infinitely rather run against General Eisenhower than against Taft.

They have had enough trouble with the Ohio Senator, and they want no more. Twice they attempted to out-talk him—after the tax-cut and Taft-Hartley Act votes in 1947; and both times more Democrats in Congress wound up following Taft's lead than supporting the White House. Two years ago, the New Dealers set out to "purge" Taft when he ran for re-election, and were snowed under in the greatest landslide in Ohio history.

Some of the national spokesmen who have been loudest in support of General Eisenhower are publications or individuals which have been strongly subservient to the New Deal concepts. For that matter, in half a dozen elections where Democrats could legally vote in the Republican primaries, it has been obvious that the Democratic registrants were actively throwing their votes to him.

Are the voters "too dumb" to see what is going on? Are they ignorant of the fact that it is their money, and money borrowed against the credit of their children and their grandchildren, which is being laddled out so open-handedly to them by the entrenched gang at Washington, hoping thereby to buy enough votes for one more four-year lease of power? Are they ignorant of what it means that the Democrats should be openly trying to force them to pick one Republican nominee in preference to another?

Defer Action on Bensalem Club's Plea for License

Continued from Page One does not permit any drinking or sale of alcohol on the premises, an application to amend the charter and apply for a club liquor license is being made.

Walter B. Frederick, 44, Oakford, a charter member, as the second witness, testified an associate member must serve a year's probation before he can become an active member. Only an active member may vote and hold an office, but an associate member pays the same dues and has a voice at the meetings.

Real estate owned by the Hilltop Athletic Association was valued at $20,000. A resolution was passed April 22 to amend the charter in order to have liquor or beer for social functions, legally on the premises.

There was no opposition present and a delegation of 10 Hilltop clubmen were present at the court hearing.

President Judge Keller said: "Down in your section of the county things are changing and moving so fast that I think you should have a larger active than associate membership. We don't want this to grow into an organization in which only a few men control everything."

Judge Edwin H. Satterthwaite also suggested that some better provisions for the sale of real estate or dissolution of the association be incorporated into the by-laws.

President Gruver testified that originally some men got together and put some money into the building and ground out of which grew the Hilltop Athletic Association, Inc.

District Attorney Willard S. Curtin presented the petition and the Court deferred decision until everything is in readiness.

Victory Party Is Scheduled Tonight

Dermody-Mack Nuptials Take Place In St. Mark's Church

A wedding of interest occurred in St. Mark's R. C. Church at the hour of five on Saturday, when Miss Mary Mack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Mack, 241 West Circle, was united in marriage to Mr. Edward J. Dermody, Jr., son of Mrs. Edward J. Dermody, Sr., of Morrisville. The Rev. E. Paul Baird was officiating priest.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, was attired in an all-blue tulle dress, ballerina length. It was patterned with stand-up, rolled collar; three-quarter length sleeves having wide cuffs; a skirt featuring deep pleat in the front. Buttons which trimmed the dress were self-covered. Her white hat had pearl and bugle-bead trimming, and a white face veil was worn. White slippers and gloves completed the costume. Her flowers consisted of a hand-bouquet of white roses and pale blue baby's breath.

The bride's sole attendant, Miss Mary VanCleave, of South River, N. J., cousin, wore a pale pink dress, made similar to that of the bride with short sleeves. Her accessories were in navy blue. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of pink rose-buds with navy blue ruffles.

Mr. Thomas J. Mack, brother of the bride, was best man for Mr. Dermody; the usher being Mr. William J. Mack, Jr., another brother. A special bouquet of mixed flowers was placed at the statue of the Blessed Mother.

Music was provided by vocalist, Mr. John Artim; and organist, Miss Katherine Keating, Linden street. Seventy were invited to the reception at the Mack residence.

Attired in a gray dress, navy blue accessories, light blue topper, and wearing a white baby orchid corsage, Mrs. Dermody left with the bridegroom for a trip to Washington, D. C., and Williamsburg, Va. Mr. and Mrs. Dermody will occupy a newly-built residence at 246 Elmwood avenue, Mercersville, N. J.

Selection of Mrs. Mack for the wedding ceremony was a navy blue dress, white accessories, and pink corsage. Mrs. Dermody, the bridegroom's mother, made choice of navy blue ensemble, and pink corsage.

Patricia Kentzler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kentzler, Monroe street, had a double celebration commemorating her tenth birthday anniversary on Wednesday. In the afternoon, at the weekly meeting of Patricia's club, "The Seven", she entertained at a party. There was a large cake iced in pink, and pink and green baskets of candy. Ice cream and soft drinks were served also. The club members attending were: Pamela Johnson, Maryann Kentzler, Joan DiLorenzo, Gail Fannini, Elaine Pica and Winifred Jackson. In the evening, the family celebration was held. Guests included: Mr. and Mrs. John Vasey, Fergusonville; Mrs. Hugo Kentzler, Carol Ann Piuma, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin George, Sr., and son Calvin, Jr., Diane and Joyce Kentzler, Croydon. Cake, ice cream and beverage were served. Each guest received a basket filled with candy. Patricia received gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Houser, Jackson street, and grandson "Larry" Bailey, Bath road, spent May 3-4 in the Pocono mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Horan and children, New York, N. Y., spent the week-end with Mrs. Marie Gratz, Monroe street.

Cousins from this area are among those training at Fort Meade, Md. They are Edward J. Cliver, 25, of 313 Brook street, and Irvin R. Wong, Jr., of Bath road, Bristol township. Wong, son of Irvin R. Wong, Sr., Cornwells Heights, was employed as a spot-welder at Kaiser Metal Products, Inc., plant, prior to entering the service. His active service during World War II extended from June, 1947, to December, 1948. Cliver was a mechanic, being employed by Manhattan Soap Co., prior to entering the army.

Among the prizes to be given tonight at the card party sponsored by Anchor Yacht Club Auxiliary in the club house on Pine Grove st., are: set of dishes, man's wallet, flash light, beverage set, pen-knife, waste basket, groceries and numerous other articles. Playing will start at 8:30. Mrs. Henry Streeter is chairman.

Mrs. Julie Farrington and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Austin, Brooklyn, N. Y., were visitors for a few days with Fred Leyden and Mr. and Mrs. Stacy Cullen, Jr., 1011 Pond st.

Among the officers installed are: Mrs. Cordelia Mucklow, worthy matron; Mrs. Lillian Kuhn, assoc. matron; Mrs. Lena Broadbridge, P. M. secretary; Mrs. Hilda Wunsch, P. M. treasurer; Miss Elizabeth Foster, conductress; Mrs. Helen Tomlinson, associate conductress; Miss Louise Smoyer, P. M., trustee for three years.

Appointed officers: Mrs. Gertrude Warner, Mrs. Thelma Rockhill, Mrs. Edythe Fridinger, Mrs. Gladys Bintliff, Mrs. Pearl King, Mrs. Hilda Albright, Mrs. Sarah Campbell, Mrs. Elsie Lawrence, Mrs. Eleanor Lawrence; Color bearers, Mrs. Elizabeth Slater, Mrs. Virginia Ludwig and Mrs. Anne Warner.

There were guests present from many parts of the state who expressed pleasure to be present at this ceremony. The retiring and incoming officers received gifts.

When the ceremonies were concluded many members, guests and friends journeyed to Edgely Fire Co. Station. A banquet was served by a caterer, followed with dancing and games to orchestral music.

Shows How Bad Features Of Gambling Offset Gain

"Honor to whom honor is due" was the order of business at the meeting of Newtown Women's Christian Temperance Union at the home of Mrs. Stephen M. Vandegrift, Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. William O. Gantz, vice-president, presiding.

Mrs. William R. Stuckert conducted a service for Mother's day, using illustrations from Holy Writ along with modern madonna portrayals. Miss Elizabeth A. Woodman gave warm tribute to Mrs. Ella Boule and Mrs. Ida Wise Smith, who for so many years championed the white ribbon cause.

The treasurer, Mrs. H. Giffin Miller, was given instructions to pay balance of the crusade fund due the county.

Miss Julia Balderston gave a comprehensive review of various phases of gambling carried on in the county in early days, and showed how people come to realize that the money from the gambling was for off set by the bad features and degenerating effects on the gamblers. "From 1890 to 1927 — race track betting, number rackets, etc., were little carried on but since then the various commercial gambling devices and measures have become wide spread. It is estimated that there is three times as much wagering in various pools, numbers, etc., than in pari-mutual race betting. There are 250 factories in the United States manufacturing slot machines alone. The sweepstakes from Irish races, for instance, sound enormous but nothing is said of the thousands of losers. Herbert Spencer defined gambling as "gain without merit, and gain from another's loss."

She reminded that "Gambling impoverishes homes, lowers character, induces crime and makes a loss of efficiency in factories and business. Recently at a meeting of churchmen of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey, its bishop has declared 'Gambling in any form in support of the Christian Church is in my judgement most dangerous. By no means can I construe the fruits of gambling a holy sacrifice.' opposed the use of bingo for raising church money."

The group next gave bits of good news which they had recently gleaned. One told a bill in Congress to prohibit hard liquor advertisements on radio and television. Many states are taking action to aid the alcoholic and halt the 'teen age drug use.'

On June 12 at the home of Miss Julia Balderston election will be conducted.

FASTER COMETS

LONDON—(INS)—A faster and more powerful British Comet airliner, fitted with Rolls-Royce Avon engines instead of de Havilland

Ghost jets, recently made its first flight. Avon Comets will introduce the first jet service across the Atlantic, slashing the London-New York trip to about eight hours, probably by 1954.

Sen. Martin Warns Nation of "Being Pushed Into A Dictatorship"

sacred freedoms that are the foundation of our greatness as a Nation.

"We have been through times of financial depression. We have battled against drought and floods.

"We have resisted the rising tide of Communism in many parts of the world.

"We are building our defensive strength to meet the danger of further Communist aggression.

"But, my fellow Pennsylvanians, none of these threats to the future of the American Republic has been more grave or more ominous than the basic issue growing out of the recent seizure of the Nation's steel industry by the President.

"Upon the outcome of that issue depends the kind of government we are to have in the year's ahead.

"We have reached a cross-road in our history. Now, more than ever before, we can recognize Benjamin Franklin's reply as the voice of prophecy.

"We, in these United States, will have a Republic only so long as we can keep it. Our plan of government will survive only so long as we are faithful to the ideals of those who established it.

"It is not my purpose in this talk to discuss the controversy in the steel industry in terms of wages, prices or profits.

"But we do have every right to question any attempt by the President, or anyone else, to impose upon this Nation a government that does not derive its powers from the Constitution or from laws enacted by Congress.

"We have every right to question any attempt to obstruct or deny the authority of our courts to protect the people against injustice.

whether by the President or anyone else.

"I want to confine this talk to the fundamental issue involved in the President's order. And that is whether or not we are to continue under the form of government contemplated by the Founders of our Republic when they framed the Constitution of the United States.

"In other words, whether or not we are to preserve and safeguard the system which has protected the freedom of the individual and has given us the greatest material, cultural and spiritual achievement the world has ever known.

"The great question before us today is whether the three branches of our government, legislative, executive and judicial, shall each operate within the broad, clearly defined channels of authority set forth in the Constitution—or whether the executive branch of our government may break loose with the violence of a Mississippi or a Missouri River on a rampage, flooding away the rights of the other two, the rights of the sovereign states and the rights of all our people, just as these rampaging rivers have swept destructively over farm and city in recent weeks.

"My fellow Pennsylvanians, I hope you will listen to this and listen most carefully. It affects every man, woman and child in the United States.

What I am saying affects your personal freedom, your right to own property, your freedom of speech and worship, your right to work at the job of your choice, your right to join a labor union, and all other rights guaranteed to you under our Constitution and the laws of our land.

"The United States will never face a more vital issue—short of invasion by a foreign power.

"What has happened does not frighten our citizens as would the dropping of enemy bombs. Yet the damage to freedom of the individual can be much more devastating.

"Unfortunately we have been conditioned to the invasion of our rights by 20 years of expanding and concentrating power in the executive branch of the Federal government.

"For 20 years we have lived in an atmosphere of creeping Socialism. Now we have taken a great, bounding leap toward all-out dictatorship.

"When President Truman seized the steel mills under what he called 'the power vested in me by the Constitution' the owners of the various business involved took the government into court in Washington. They challenged the President's authority to take possession of private property without due process of law.

"Mr. Holmes Baldrige, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, went before Federal Judge David A. Pine to argue the Administration's case.

"Now, I urge that you listen most carefully to some of the things Mr. Baldrige told the court. Such statements had never been made before in an American court. The Assistant Attorney General of the United States said:

"It is our position that the President is accountable only to the country and that the decisions of the President are conclusive.

"We say that it is prohibited for the courts to encroach upon the executive authority in a situation such as we have here.

"Think it over. The President, by executive directive, had seized certain properties owned by thousands and thousands of stockholders, large and small, without the approval of Congress and without authority under any law.

"The Administration insisted it was done under inherent powers of the executive. It was argued that the owners of the property are powerless to go into court and seek an injunction to get their property back.

"Now let me read you again from the argument in court.

"Mr. Baldrige stated that the Constitution vested all executive power in the President and added, 'Insofar as legislative powers are concerned, the Congress has only those powers that are specifically delegated to it.'

"Judge Pine asked and again I quote: 'So when the sovereign people gave the powers enumerated in the Constitution, it limited Congress, it limited the Judiciary, but it did not limit the Executive?'

"To this, Mr. Brainbridge replied: 'That is the way we read Article II of the Constitution.'

"My fellow Pennsylvanians, for what I believe to be the first time in the history of the United States, the Department of Justice, on behalf of the Administration, declared bluntly that there is no limit on the powers of the President.

"Do you believe that? Do you believe such a thing is good for our country? Do you believe it is American?

"The only countries in which there is no limit upon the powers of the executive are dictatorships. There was no limit on the power of Hitler in Germany. There is no limit today upon the power of Stalin.

"Is the United States heading in the same direction?

"Are we being pushed into the dictatorship of a President whose power to act is unlimited?

"Do you remember how Stalin once sneered: 'How many divisions does the Pope have?'

"Do you want an all-powerful dictator in this country who can sneer, 'How many divisions does the Supreme Court have?'

"This is a new and terribly dangerous departure in our government. It is an extension of the power which the executive branch has been taking from the States and the people for 20 years.

"As recently as the spring of 1950, the President and his Administration didn't dare to claim such broad inherent powers.

"At that time a coal strike was threatened and the President appeared before Congress asking for specific authority to seize the nation's coal mines.

"Now, the President's action in seizing the steel plants, if permitted to stand, would put him above the law. He takes the position that he can seize the steel mills, the coal mines, or anything else without any grant of authority from the representatives of the people, the Congress of the United States, if he, alone, decides it is in the public interest.

"Let me remind you of something that happened in 1946. There was a railroad strike. The President asked the men to go back to work but they refused to do so. He went to Congress and asked for a law to draft the strikers into the Army so that he could force them to operate the railroads.

"He didn't claim then that he had inherent power to seize the railroads. He asked for a law.

"You will remember that Congress refused to give him the power to draft strikers. Congress kept its head, even though the President had lost his.

"Now he has gone beyond this. He says that he has the right to step in and do as he pleases, ignoring Congress and the courts, and ignoring the Taft-Hartley law which provides orderly and legal procedure for handling strikes that threaten the National Welfare.

"The President's assumption of power to seize private property is not surprising in view of his proposal to draft railroad strikers into the Army.

"If he had been given that power by Congress in 1946 he could have crushed the railroad brotherhoods. He could have robbed the workers of all their legal rights. He could have forced them to work as conscripted labor under military rule and discipline.

"Thank God we have not reached that point in the United States. We pray that we never shall but we must remember that if the President's right to seize the steel mills should be sustained, another President, at some future time, might decide to seize the unions, take possession of their funds and put Federal officials in charge.

"What would that mean?

"Simply this—the government would then direct men when and where they shall work and how much they shall be paid. All the gains made by labor in years of struggle would be wiped out.

"One of the greatest labor leaders who ever lived, Samuel Gompers, recognized the danger to the labor cause in favors granted by government.

"In his Autobiography, Seventy Years of Life and Labor, there appears this significant statement:

"Once you get the government to do things with men, you never know what the end is going to be."

"The words are not those of Gompers. He was quoting a Pennsylvania political leader and statesman with whom he was conferring on proposed labor legislation. In relating the incident, Gompers states:

"That was in exact coincidence with my own point of view."

"Gompers saw the danger of Government regulations and restriction. His broad vision and clear foresight warned that one-sided laws do not always give the advantage they seem to confer.

"He knew that compulsion by law or by executive directive, could lead to trouble, whether applied to labor or to industry.

"All I ask' he says in his Autobiography, 'is to give us the freedom we want to work out our own salvation and to give industry the same opportunity.'

"Another statement from the pen of Sam Gompers strikes me as worthy of serious consideration today.

"Foremost in my mind is to tell the politicians to keep their hands off and thus to preserve voluntary institutions and opportunity for individual and group initiative and leave the way open to deal with problems as the experience and facts of industry shall indicate."

"I commend the words of Sam Gompers to the leaders of the steel workers and to the representatives of the industry.

"Industrial peace cannot be established on force or compulsion. It must be based on true collective bargaining without pressure on either side from the heavy hand of government or the influence of politics.

"If we have government control of industry, government control of labor must necessarily follow.

"Both are contrary to the principles of Americanism—and any violation of those principles undermines the foundations of American freedom."

Antonelli Again Emerges As 'Mibs' Champion Here

For the fourth successive year, Joseph Antonelli, 925 Pear street, emerged champion of Bristol "mibs" players, Saturday, when the annual marble tournament was conducted by Chester W. Terchon Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Shooting on Memorial Park courts, "Joe" had but two opponents, and made an easy victory.

By virtue of this win, "Joe" will enter the county and district championships at Doylestown on May 24th. Should he win there he will try for the state championship June 1st at Harrisburg. For each of the past three years "Joe" has also won the county and district championships, and one year finished third in the state contests.

C. A. Schweizer was chairman of the committee in charge.

ASPIRANTS FOR PRESIDENCY FILL 1952 ESCALATORS

So Many Candidates Traffic
Cop Needed To Regulate Jam

CLOSEUP GLIMPSES

4 Playing "For Keeps," and
One Playing "Hard
To Get"

This is the first article of a series providing intimate, close-up glimpses of the leading presidential candidates—the men who seem at this time to be in front of the field for the nominations that will be made at the Republican and Democratic conventions in Chicago this July.

How much do we really know about these men—one of whom probably will be guiding our national destiny beginning next year? We think we know their politics, but what do we know of the candidates as people—as simple human beings? Do they like children? Do they play cards, or drink? Are they golf addicts? Do they help with the dishes at home? Just what kind of men are they?

These articles, by one of America's great feature writers, noted reporter, columnist, author Inez Robb, give the interesting—and sometimes surprising—answers.

By INEZ ROBB
International News Service Staff Correspondent

"There's always room at the top" is an adage with which no presidential aspirant ever quarrels in an election year.

And while it is true that the top itself may resemble the great open spaces, the escalators leading upward in 1952 are so crowded with presidential candidates, favorite sons and dark horses that a traffic cop is indicated to regulate the jam.

Political wiseacres count that day lost whose low descending sun fails to set yet another candidate announcing his availability for the most powerful political office on

2 Contests Conducted With "Clean-Up" Drive

One of the phases of the current "Clean-Up-Paint-Up-Fix-Up" campaign has gotten under way in Bristol borough and Bristol township schools with the scholars in junior and senior high school competing to determine who will win the prizes for the best essay and the most appealing poster.

Judging in both cases will take place during the week of May 19th and prizes will be presented the winners by David Hertzler, honorary chairman of the essay and poster committees; and Francis O'Boyle, general chairman of the clean up committee.

The prize for the most appealing poster will be a $15 set of paints and brushes. This prize was donated by the Kenray Sign Co. The judging will be done by Paul Barrett, Esq., Dr. William Goldfarb, John Gontar, Miss Ralph Proulx and Mrs. Herbert Smoyer.

The prize for the best essay will be a pen and pencil set equal in value to the paint set. This prize was donated by O'Boyle Ice Cream Co. The judges for the contest will be the Rev. Edward G. Yeomans, Mrs. Paul Barrett and Mrs. William Levinson.

To Discuss Industry's Part In Development

The past industry is playing in the vast development taking place in the Delaware river valley will be discussed by top-ranking executives of the area at the mid-year conference of the Greater Philadelphia-South Jersey Council in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Monday, May 19th.

The conference is being held in connection with ceremonies to be conducted by the Philadelphia section of the American Society of Civil Engineers to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the ASCE.

Thomas Buckley, consulting engineer of the GP-SJ council and former Director of Public Works of Philadelphia, is chairman of the ASCE celebration committee, and he also will preside at the panel session on industry that the council will sponsor as the highlight of its mid-year conference.

Speakers to be heard during the GP-SJ panel session will include Earl Yerkes, engineer of equipment, the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania; R. G. Rinehart, president, Philadelphia Electric Co.; James M. Symes, executive vice-president, Pennsylvania Railroad, and H. Thomas Hallowell, Jr., president, Standard Pressed Steel Co., Philadelphia.

Dr. James Creese, president of Drexel Institute of Technology, will be the principal speaker at the opening session, beginning at 2 p. m.

ARE THE PEOPLE "TOO DUMB"?

One of the remarks attributed to the late Harry Hopkins, who for years was principal braintrust for President Roosevelt, is the saying that "The American people are too damn dumb to know what we are doing to them."

This is one of those quotations which quite likely was never said in exactly those words. Yet it describes accurately the political concepts of that era—concepts which still determine our national policies. It is in the same category with another comment along similar lines—"we will tax, tax, tax, spend, spend, spend, elect, elect, elect."

The essence of the New Deal's political strategy, in which Harry Hopkins appears to have been a competent teacher and FDR an apt pupil, is that the government would seize vast sums of money in the form of taxes, and then use these slush-funds to buy support of the voters at election time.

This has been done, and with phenomenal success. It has kept in office a greedy, stupid bunch of political hacks who have committed more terrible mistakes than all their predecessors together—just as Roosevelt and Truman each has the peculiar distinction of having spent, during his term of office, more money than the total of all preceding presidents.

There is strong reason to believe that at no time since 1937, when Roosevelt tried to lay violent political hands on the Supreme Court, has a majority of the American people really supported either Roosevelt or Truman. Certainly it is true that wherever the issue of the New Deal has been fought out before the voters under circumstances which made it impossible for federal spending to be used to pervert the election, the result has been a landslide of sentiment against New Dealism.

So far as undercurrent is concerned, it is quite likely that the actual opinion of the whole people ran against the Truman doctrines by 60 per cent or better in 1948, which makes the success of the Truman spending programs in "buying" his reelection that year all the more striking.

The "spend-and-elect" strategy has debased and demoralized.

SENATOR MARTIN WARNS NATION OF BEING "PUSHED INTO A DICTATORSHIP OF A PRESIDENT WHOSE POWER TO ACT IS UNLIMITED"

(Special to the Courier)

WASHINGTON, May 12—The recent take-over of the steel industry by President Truman was "a new and dangerous departure in our government" which brings the American people to a crossroad in their history where they must choose whether to remain a republic or allow themselves to be "pushed into a dictatorship of a President whose power to act is unlimited," U. S. Senator Edward Martin of Pennsylvania declared in a radio report over the week-end.

The President "takes the position that he can seize the steel mills, the coal mines, or anything else without any grant of authority from the representatives of the people, the Congress of the United States, if he, alone, decides it is in the public interest," Senator Martin declared.

"For the first time in the history

MONDAY, 19TH OF MAY

A human relations council is being organized for this part of Pennsylvania, to be known as "Human Relations Council of Bucks County." Representatives of various religious groups of the county, who recently set up an organizing committee for such, plan a panel discussion for Monday, May 19th, in the Pennsylvania high school, Makefield and Big Oak roads, near Yardley.

With Richard McFeely, principal of George School, Newtown, as the moderator, Clarence E. Pickett will be the main speaker. Mr. Pickett is secretary emeritus of the American Friends Service Committee.

Panel discussion leaders will be: Drayton Bryant, housing; John D. Dougherty, employment; John Burrows, of Bristol high school staff, education.

The Rev. E. Clarendon Hyde, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Hultmeville, is serving as convener of the organizing committee.

The session will get underway at eight p. m.

The leaders in the movement state: "The purpose of this council will be to seek solution to the many perplexing problems of our vastly expanding community on an interdenominational and inter-racial basis. In order to explore further the necessary or desirable steps which might be undertaken, all interested groups and organizations are asked to have at least two members participate in the program."

THE PAPPALAN FUNERAL

ARE THE PEOPLE "TOO DUMB"?

One of the remarks attributed to the late Harry Hopkins, who for years was principal braintrust for President Roosevelt, is the saying that "The American people are too damn dumb to know what we are doing to them."

This is one of those quotations which quite likely was never said in exactly those words. Yet it describes accurately the political concepts of that era—concepts which still determine our national policies. It is in the same category with another comment along similar lines—"we will tax, tax, tax, spend, spend, spend, elect, elect, elect."

The essence of the New Deal's political strategy, in which Harry Hopkins appears to have been a competent teacher and FDR an apt pupil, is that the government would seize vast sums of money in the form of taxes, and then use these slush-funds to buy support of the voters at election time.

This has been done, and with phenomenal success. It has kept in office a greedy, stupid bunch of political hacks who have committed more terrible mistakes than all their predecessors together—just as Roosevelt and Truman each has the peculiar distinction of having spent, during his term of office, more money than the total of all preceding presidents.

There is strong reason to believe that at no time since 1937, when Roosevelt tried to lay violent political hands on the Supreme Court, has a majority of the American people really supported either Roosevelt or Truman. Certainly it is true that wherever the issue of the New Deal has been fought out before the voters under circumstances which made it impossible for federal spending to be used to pervert the election, the result has been a landslide of sentiment against New Dealism.

So far as undercurrent is concerned, it is quite likely that the actual opinion of the whole people ran against the Truman doctrines by 60 per cent or better in 1948, which makes the success of the Truman spending programs in "buying" his reelection that year all the more striking.

The "spend-and-elect" strategy has debased and demoralized.

of the United States, the Department of Justice, on behalf of the Administration, declared bluntly that there is no limit on the power of the president. The only countries in which there is no limit upon the powers of the executive are dictatorships.

Senator Martin recently won the endorsement of the Republican Party, at the spring primary, for re-election to the U. S. Senatorship. His action follows in full:

"I want to recall an incident in American history which has a direct bearing on recent developments in our government.

"It occurred in our own City of Philadelphia in September, 1787. The Constitutional Convention had finished its long and difficult labors after four months of debate and discussion.

"It is related that when Benjamin Franklin stepped out into State House Square he was approached by a woman, who asked:

"What kind of government have you given us?"

"Dr. Franklin, the wisest and greatest of all Pennsylvania statesmen, replied:

"A Republic, if you can keep it."

"Since that day there have been many times of grave crisis in the life of our Republic.

"There have been times when the American people have been called upon to pay a great price in blood and treasure to keep their Republic.

"In our own time we have fought two World Wars in defense of the

EXPANSION PROGRAM

Herman Kesler, president of American Metal Specialties Corporation, of Hatboro, manufacturer of AMSCO Doll-E-Toys and Kidd-E-Toys, announces the opening of another AMSCO toy plant at Pennel.

The new AMSCO plant, which will be known as the Pennel Division, will produce the company's packaged products.

The opening of the Pennel division is part of AMSCO's expansion program. The company's main plant in Hatboro will be enlarged and will devote itself exclusively to the manufacture of the AMSCO metal toy line and other fabricated metal products.

In addition to the Hatboro and Pennel plants, the company maintains sales offices in New York, N. Y., and Chicago, Ill.

Harold W. Jenkins Dies In A Phila. Hospital

A patient for three weeks in Mercy-Douglas Hospital, Philadelphia, Harold W. Jenkins, 431 Cedar st., died there this morning.

Mr. Jenkins was an employee of Railway Specialties Co., and member of America Hose, Hook and Ladder Co., No. 2, and Sons of Italy Lodge. He had lived here for 10 years.

Survivors are his wife, Margaret; his mother, Mrs. Joseph McLean, of Florida; daughters, Mrs. William Bolton and Miss Judith Jenkins, Bristol; a son, Arlond, of Croydon; and two brothers, Floyd of Peckville, and Leland of Holmesdale.

Arrangements are in charge of John C. Black, funeral director.

To Be Given Hearing, Due To An Auto Accident

A passenger car belonging to a Bristol, R. D. No. 3, man, was damaged approximately $60 early yesterday morning, when involved in a hit and run accident on Trevose road.

Edward J. Wurster, Newportville road, Bristol, R. D. No. 3, according to police, was operating a 1949 sedan on Trevose road, near Taylor road, at 12:50 a. m., yesterday morning, when another vehicle travelling in the same direction, passed the Wurster machine, side-swiping the left front door and continued on, police said.

Police report Morton Dyer, Jr., 22, Newportville, was apprehended at his home, yesterday morning, as the driver of the machine that struck the Wurster vehicle. It is reported Dyer turned off the lights of the vehicle to avoid identification.

Bensalem police chief, George Rentz, investigated.

A hearing will be held tonight.

Detroit, Mich., was founded in 1701.

Former Grocer Dies At His Croydon Home

CROYDON, May 12—At the age of 85 years, Joseph Scott died at his home, 1632 Fourth avenue, yesterday. He has been a local resident for 25 years, and for 18 years was engaged in the grocery business.

Mr. Scott, who was ill for five years, is survived by his wife, Katherine; daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Harvey, Atlantic City, N. J.; Mrs. Kathryn Roberts, West Bristol; Mrs. Mary Moore, Mrs. Cecelia Burger, Croydon; sons, Joseph G. Scott, Croydon, and Roy Scott, Phila.; six grandchildren; three brothers, William, Roy and Warren Scott, Philadelphia.

The service will be held at 11 a. m., Wednesday, at the J. Maurice Tomlinson funeral home, Cornwells Heights, with burial in Our Lady of Grace Cemetery, Middletown township. The Rev. R. L. Carlson, pastor of Harriman Methodist Church, Bristol, will officiate. Friends may call Tuesday evening.

Pleased With Support Given Aeromodelers

Bristol Aeromodelers members are well pleased with public support they have received for their May 30th model flying circus.

The flying field, recently reconditioned by Joseph Haines who donated his services, is said to be in excellent condition. Bristol Exchange Club and its model club committee, Archibald Dalrymple, Thomas Stricker and Sheridan Metz, are giving the model club help with many contest details.

Local businessmen, along with a number of model aircraft parts manufacturers, have donated prizes. Among some of the choice ones are: model engines, donated by Bristol Hobby Shop; airplane ride, Engle flying service; camera, Nichols Photo Service; and dozens of model plane kits.

Club members arranged to erect the snowflake around the field and prepare parking grounds.

Work at Levittown Project Is at A Standstill Today

LEVITTOWN, May 12—Construction work was at a standstill here today on the Levittown housing project. Whether the delay is due to the weather or to the A. F. L. pickets could not be determined.

The pickets marched back and forth in front of Levitt property for the third straight day. The picket line was orderly and many of the men were drinking hot coffee that was being distributed.

The strike is said to be in protest of Levitt building practices and several hundred building and construction trades council men have joined in the demonstration.

The State Police Say:

Riding on the outside or rear of a motor vehicle while such vehicle is in motion is forbidden under the Vehicle Code. Persons on bicycles, roller skates, or sleds are forbidden to hold fast to or hitch on to any vehicle. Drivers of motor vehicles, and owners of such vehicles, if present, are violating the law if they permit anyone to do any of these acts.

DOYLESTOWN, May 12—"Your active and associate membership set-up doesn't please the court," said President Judge Hiram H. Keller in commenting upon the application of the Hilltop Athletic Association, Inc., Bensalem Township, during a hearing. The club is seeking a club license.

The Bensalem township club has 50 active members and 90 associates.

Raymond S. Gruver, 59, Oakford, president, testified the H. A. A., which was organized in 1938, has 50 active members and about 90 associate members. The association was incorporated in 1947 or '48.

The association owns about 10 acres of land in Bensalem township and a club house, 50 by 60 feet.

The purpose of the Hilltop Athletic Association, President Gruver testified, is to promote social activities for the clubmen and sponsor athletic events for the youth of the community.

MAY QUEEN CROWNED

At the nine o'clock Mass yesterday in Saint Mark's R. C. Church 77 children received their first holy communion. The Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Albert L. Glass, assisted by the Rev. E. Paul Baird and the Rev. Thomas W. McGuire.

The children were instructed under direction of Mother M. Germaine, assisted by the Sisters of the School faculty.

The children assembled at Saint Mark's School and were led in procession by Arthur Younglove, as cross bearer, accompanied by William Warfel and William Radovitch as candle bearers. James Kirk and Robert Wilkins were directors of the children to the altar; Michael Kravchack and Paul Krochack were the servers at the mass.

In the afternoon at 2:30, there was the crowning of the May Queen and a procession.

Reading Co. Permitted to Abandon 19-Mile Spur Service

Philadelphia—The State Superior Court today upheld a Public Utility Commission order permitting the Reading Railroad to abandon rail service on a 19-mile spur between Hatboro and New Hope.

The decision by Judge Chester H. Rhodes allows the carrier to substitute bus service on a nearly parallel line with the trackage.

Judge Rhodes ruled that a commuters' committee which appealed the PUC order was not a legal entity. He said he did not make his ruling on those grounds, however.

THE BLUNT NOSED BEAST

The huge aircraft carrier Wasp, which ran down and sank its small escorting vessel, the Hobson, in mid-Atlantic, is moored in New York harbor. Vestiges of the tragedy, which claimed 176 lives among the Hobson's crew, are all too apparent. A slanting gash in her bow is a grim memorial to the ship which didn't return.

It now appears that while all interest was centered in the fate of the crewmen of the smaller ship, the Wasp, too, was in grave danger. Greatest peril stemmed from the weather, which threw low visibility, high seas, and gale-like winds at the wounded carrier like Sunday punches. Only prodigious feats of seamanship and use of all orthodox, and some unorthodox, damage control tactics saved her.

Excerpts from the ship's log, released by the Navy, reveal the mixture of tragedy, comedy, heroism and drudgery implicit in a disaster at sea. An anonymous deck officer scribbled in the rough log that the Wasp was a "blunt nosed beast" wandering about in a series of drunken zigzags to make her ride better and to make the repair task in the steel caverns behind the bow easier. Sometimes she fled the waves stern first. Her best speed toward New York was 10 knots.

The damaged Wasp will be in repair for many months. Meanwhile the personnel of the two vessels will painstakingly reconstruct the sea tragedy for the edification of a naval court. The wounds in the steel hull and in the minds of the Hobson's survivors will gradually heal as time dulls the sharper edges of the disaster.

SCIENCE WAS HIS BEAT

There was a time in the annals of American journalism when the man who reported crime, scandal and conflict was the star of the news room.

But within the past 25 years a new writer has risen in importance—the science reporter. And his value on newspaper staffs has become greater as science in all its branches has developed new ways of living, new methods of righting disease, and, of course, new styles for waging wars.

A pioneer in this branch of American journalism was Howard W. Blakeslee, who died the other day.

Without benefit of formal training in science, Mr. Blakeslee—whose dispatches were read by millions—had learned how to grasp the knowledge of the scientists and translate it into everyday language for the public.

He showed that the basic honesty of a good reporter and a desire to know what is happening in the world are more important than a string of degrees in bringing accurate news of science to the public. Some of the outstanding scientific societies of the nation heaped honors upon him—a layman who helped people to understand the impact of science.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

(By Courier Staff Member)

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Jan. 7, 1904. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

HULMEVILLE—A. Comly has opened an oyster saloon in the property formerly occupied by Hibbs & Brown.

ATTLEBORO—The weavers at Markgraf's are out on a strike.

ANDALUSIA—We do not pretend that the Chapel of Andalusia is as beautiful as Solomon's Temple, but it was built for the same purpose, and for all we know there may be as many angels in it—at any rate it is worth going there to see.

OXFORD VALLEY—The following is the program of the mortgage burning to be held in the Chapel on Sunday afternoon, January 10, at 2:30. Organ Voluntary, Miss Bertha Schaffer; Hymn, "I Love Thy Kingdom Lord"; Apostles' Creed; Invocation; Scripture Reading; Music, Male Quartette; History of Oxford Valley C. E. Chapel, A. L. Spencer; Music, Male Quartette; Anniversary Sermon, Rev. O. J. Randall; Music, Male Quartette; Offering, (Organ Voluntary—Miss Bertha Schaffer); Mortgage Burning; Closing Prayer and Benediction. Everyone is cordially invited to this service.

John Shull, who formerly conducted the Bristol News Agency, is now one of the proprietors of a popular restaurant on Vine street, above Eighth, Philadelphia.

Howard McMullen has enlisted as plumber on board the United States transport ship "McClellan," which is now in New York harbor waiting sailing orders. Mr. McMullen about a year ago, returned from a long voyage on the "McClellan" after having visited South America, Honolulu, the Philippines and other points.

The skating pond provided by the trolley company near Crofton soon caught public favor. On New Year's Day the company carried 450 people to the place. That night the Eddington band furnished music and the merry skaters had a fine time, the pond being brightly illuminated with electric lights. When the skating is good the public is made aware of the fact by placards on each end of the trolley cars.

At the annual meeting of the male members of the M. E. Church held in the church parlor on last Friday evening John K. Young,

Harvey S. Rue and David O. Taylor were elected trustees to serve for three years. After the adjournment of the male members meeting, the board of trustees re-organized for the ensuing year by electing C. M. Foster, president; J. W. Wright, secretary, and J. K. Young, treasurer.

Postmaster Minster, of Bristol, had a series of accidents at his home last week that caused him to believe that he was under the spell of some evil genius. On New Year's Day Mr. Minster went to the cellar to attend to the furnace and placed a lighted lamp on a shelf. After giving the heater the required attention he went upstairs and forgot the lamp until noticing a volume of smoke pouring up through the parlor carpet. Investigation revealed the fact that the lamp had set fire to the boards in the ceiling of the cellar. The incipient blaze was extinguished without causing much damage. The next day, while family was at dinner, a servant girl fell over an oil stove that was burning in the hall on the second floor upsetting the stove and causing the burning oil to spread over the floor. With the aid of blankets the fire was put out after destroying carpets, rugs, curtains, etc. The following day Mrs. Minster met with a painful accident in the bath room, where some boards had been removed by the plumber from the floor, by stepping in the open space and breaking through the lath and plaster of the ceiling below. In order to be extracted from her painful position, a young lady who was at the house at the time had to go to the floor below and, standing on a table, break the laths away and push Mrs. Minster's foot up through the ceiling. On Sunday the water pipes in the house bursted in the bath room, flooding the place and damaging the room below. The genial postmaster rarely gets ruffled but he came to the conclusion that he had enough excitement for one week.

The ice in the Delaware at Riegelsville is nearly two feet thick. During the gorge the temporary ferry was abandoned and the United States mail was carried across the river on the tramway used in the construction of the new bridge.

Another incident of even more pertinence occurred at the time Charles E. Wilson quit as National Defense Mobilizer. Wilson didn't say so in so many words, but he implied that Mr. Truman double crossed him nine ways from Sunday. He said that he had an agreement with the President to try for a labor-management compromise in the steel wage dispute. But he said he had no sooner returned to Washington after talking to the President in Key West, than C. I. O. President Philip Murray or "one of his cohorts" called Mr. Truman and set him straight on what the union wanted.

And what the union wanted was not what the President or Wilson thought it should get. It was a bigger raise in pay and a tighter lid on steel prices. The chore of satisfying the union was handed to Nathan Feinsinger, chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, who had been making telephone calls to the President via the back door at the same time Wilson and Mr. Truman were agreeing face to face on what the union should get. "WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1952, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 12

The Defense Department in Washington is assisting President Truman in the imposition of a labor government on the United States.

None of us has voted for a labor government, such as voters in England recently shook off their backs, but this hasn't deterred Mr. Truman. He is doing it by executive fiat. And Defense Department officials are grubbing around in politics and labor-management disputes, including the steel plant seizure, at the behest of the President and the little would-be dictators who advise him at the White House.

The Defense Department was established by Congress to handle military matters. Its top civilian officials are responsible for general administration over-all policy. Nowhere in the legislation which set up the department is there any authorization for officials to serve as political operators for the President.

When Mr. Truman decreed that the last nine months of national policy-making under his administration would be dictated by organized labor, he expected and got total cooperation from the defense department. Three recent incidents prove it. There are countless others, but the three are indicative of the President's conviction that leaders of C. I. O., the A. F. of L. and sundry other union bosses know what is best for the U. S. A.

For instance, in announcing a new defense contract for a Detroit automobile plant, the defense department first cleared the contract with Walter Reuther, head of the C. I. O. Auto Workers. Reuther conferred with Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense, and then left the Pentagon to announce that the defense department was awarding the contract to a firm with which his union holds a contract. Apparently, this was the media by which the company learned that its bid for the contract had been accepted.

Reuther stated that he would continue to confer with defense department officials from time to time on the placement of contracts for war materials.

Another incident of even more pertinence occurred at the time Charles E. Wilson quit as National Defense Mobilizer. Wilson didn't say so in so many words, but he implied that Mr. Truman double crossed him nine ways from Sunday. He said that he had an agreement with the President to try for a labor-management compromise in the steel wage dispute. But he said he had no sooner returned to Washington after talking to the President in Key West, than C. I. O. President Philip Murray or "one of his cohorts" called Mr. Truman and set him straight on what the union wanted.

And what the union wanted was not what the President or Wilson thought it should get. It was a bigger raise in pay and a tighter lid on steel prices. The chore of satisfying the union was handed to Nathan Feinsinger, chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, who had been making telephone calls to the President via the back door at the same time Wilson and Mr. Truman were agreeing face to face on what the union should get. Feinsinger is a long time foe of the Taft-Hartley Labor Law, which may be one reason why Mr. Truman ducked using it to help settle the steel dispute.

A third indication of defense department and White House kowtowing to labor occurred during the recent threat of a steel strike. Nathan Witt, described on numerous occasions as a communist, who is currently a legal advisor to Copper Producing Unions, was bowed in and out of the Pentagon as though the fate of the nation hinged on his frowns.

All in all it adds up to a labor government of the U. S. A. whether we like it or not. The union bosses, including communist lawyers, are calling the turn now and will be for another nine months. Let's hope it ends there, but if they keep on at the present pace it probably will be too late to rectify the damage.

After all, there are a few other wise men in America besides Reuther and Murray and the fumbling boss of the A. F. of L., William Green. But Mr. Truman doesn't think so, hence we'll have to take it until he trots back to Missouri for a long vacation.

earth. As this is written, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D) Minn., and Sen. Brian McMahon (D) Conn., are the latest to bare their breasts to the lightning.

Minnesota's and Connecticut's favorite sons are Johnny-come-late-lies in the field, in which nine "major" candidates are already actively engaged either on their own or by proxy.

By convention time, now less than two months off, it's possible someone whose name hasn't been mentioned will be right up there grabbing for the White House door knob.

But that's something no one can know. Without indulging in guessing games or stabs-in-the-dark, this much is apparent now:

Reaching for the GOP top are "Mr. Republican", Sen. Robert A. Taft, and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Panting on their heels are Gov. Earl Warren of California, Republican vice-presidential nominee in 1948, and Harold E. Stassen, the perennial Republican bridesmaid.

Both Gov. Warren's and Mr. Stassen's last best hope is that Sen. Taft and Gen. Eisenhower may so firmly deadlock the GOP convention early in July that one or both will have a chance to grab the ball and make a touchdown.

Four men are playing for keeps in the Democratic race, and one is playing hard to get. Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, the crime buster, is out in front, but he is making his point the hard way, without the support of the Democratic party machine and over the opposition of President Truman, who controls that machine.

Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia, Sen. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma and W. Averell Harriman, director of mutual security, are in there pitching their best for the nomination.

Harriman, who has been a high echelon trouble-shooter for both the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, is a recent entry. He entered with the blessing and a playful shove from Mr. Truman after Gov. Adlai Ewing Stevenson of Illinois, the President's first and real choice as his successor, said in a loud, flat voice that he would not accept the Democratic nomination.

But hope springs eternal, and some powerful Democrats, including Jake Arvey, Democratic boss of Illinois, refuse to take Stevenson's "no" as final. Despite his very real and apparently sincere refusal of the crown, important factions in the party still hope the Illinois governor can be drafted.

These are the avowed candidates, including Gov. Stevenson, who has avowed that he isn't.

Just to the rear of these nine, favorite sons and dark horses crowd the escalators leading to the top. They are going along for the ride in the desperate hope that a convention deadlock, a political deal, a smoke-filled room or an emotional upheaval (remember Wendell Willkie!) will give them a chance at the grand jackpot or the consolation prize, i.e. the vice-presidency.

The most distinguished dark horse of them all is President Truman himself. Just as some Democratic leaders refuse to forsake the hope that Adlai Stevenson will finally submit to a draft, so other equally perspicacious leaders believe the President will see his political duty and do it, if the national convention is otherwise unable to come up with a winner, or a reasonable facsimile.

The President has said "no" in plain and forceful English. Gov. Stevenson has done likewise. But there are men who refuse to take "no" for an answer, and they could be right in either case if the chips are down and the Democratic party is in dire straits for a candidate with a fighting chance.

Kentucky's favorite son and veep, "Dear Alben" Barkley, despite his age, is still willing to make the supreme sacrifice for his party and head the ticket in '52, the smoke-room Barkuses willin'.

On the Republican escalator, Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur's breath is hot on the neck of the leading contenders. MacArthur has made it plain he is not a candidate. But if the Taft-Eisenhower struggle should lead to a stalemate, the MacArthur adherents are certain to make themselves heard and felt at the Republican convention.

However, it is the Democratic convention that is wide-open for the first time in twenty years, and the escalator is packed with such favorite sons as Senators McMahon and Humphrey; Gov. G. Mennen "Soapy" Williams of Michigan; Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois; Gov. Paul A. Dever of Massachusetts and Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio.

There is even talk of a possible end-run by two old-line Democratic party stalwarts, the one and only James A. Farley of New York, king maker and former postmaster general, and Gov. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina.

And the end is not yet. Between now and July, other favorite sons will come forward and other dark horses will enter the stake race.

Any little American boy can grow up to be a presidential candidate. In a presidential year, everybody wants to get into the act. And frequently does.

(Tomorrow: Close up look at Sen. Taft).

Are The People "Too Dumb"?

ized the American people. It is stultifying in the extreme, this business of mass bribery of the electorate, this proposition of robbing tomorrow's children to buy votes for schemers and demagogues today.

It has contaminated thinking to the point where countless persons publicly support untruths which they know in their hearts to be contemptible as well as hazardous.

The spending capacity of the New Dealers has been incredibly vast. The sheer weight of the dollars involved, together with the rich store of high positions and other preferments, has bedazzled public-minded persons of all parties.

Whenever the New Dealers have been fearful that the use of their incredibly large patronage inside their own party would not be sufficient to re-elect them, they have been singularly successful in undermining their opponents by finding fellow-travelers in the Republican Party.

It was said with great truth, for example, that the late Senator Vandenberg, a stalwart Republican who caved in before the New Deal power, did more for the Democrats in Congress than Truman and all his White House lobby were able to do.

Part of the strategy of the New Dealers in the present critical year, a strategy in which the Midas-like wealth of their political contact-men is a big factor, is a deliberate effort to influence the Republican choice.

Whatever they may say in public, the New Deal politicians would infinitely rather run against General Eisenhower than against Taft.

They have had enough trouble with the Ohio Senator, and they want no more. Twice they attempted to out-talk him—after the tax-cut and Taft-Hartley Act vetoes in 1947; and both times more Democrats in Congress wound up following Taft's lead than supporting the White House. Two years ago, the New Dealers set out to "purge" Taft when he ran for re-election, and were snowed under in the greatest landslide in Ohio history.

Some of the national spokesmen who have been loudest in support of General Eisenhower are publications or individuals which have been strongly subservient to the New Deal concepts. For that matter, in half a dozen elections where Democrats could legally vote in the Republican primaries, it has been obvious that the Democratic registrants were actively throwing their votes to him.

Are the voters "too dumb" to see what is going on? Are they ignorant of the fact that it is their money, and money borrowed against the credit of their children and their grandchildren, which is being laded out so open-handedly to them by the entrenched gang at Washington, hoping thereby to buy enough votes for one more four-year lease of power?

Are they ignorant of what it means that the Democrats should be openly trying to force them to pick one Republican nominee in preference to another?

It won't be long before we know some of the answers.

Defer Action on Bensalem Club's Plea for License

Continued from Page One does not permit any drinking or sale of alcohol on the premises, an application to amend the charter and apply for a club liquor license is being made.

Walter B. Frederick, 44, Oakford, a charter member, as the second witness, testified an associate member must serve a year's probation before he can become an active member. Only an active member may vote and hold an office, but an associate member pays the same dues and has a voice at the meetings.

Real estate owned by the Hilltop Athletic Association was valued at $20,000. A resolution was passed April 22 to amend the charter in order to have liquor or beer for social functions, legally on the premises.

There was no opposition present and a delegation of 10 Hilltop clubmen were present at the court hearing.

President Judge Keller said: "Down in your section of the county things are changing and moving so fast that I think you should have a larger active than associate membership. We don't want this to grow into an organization in which only a few men control everything."

Judge Edwin H. Satterthwaite also suggested that some better provisions for the sale of real estate or dissolution of the association be incorporated into the by-laws.

President Gruver testified that originally some men got together and put some money into the building and ground out of which grew the Hilltop Athletic Association, Inc.

District Attorney Willard S. Curtin presented the petition and the Court deferred decision until everything is in readiness.

Victory Party Is Scheduled Tonight

Continued from Page One picnic in August, is the next big event planned by the club, which now has approximately 1,500 members, and a ladies' auxiliary with approximately 500 members.

Dermody-Mack Nuptials Take Place In St. Mark's Church

A wedding of interest occurred in St. Mark's R. C. Church at the hour of five on Saturday, when Miss Mary Mack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Mack, 241 West Circle, was united in marriage to Mr. Edward J. Dermody, Jr., son of Mr. Edward J. Dermody, Sr., of Morrisville. The Rev. E. Paul Baird was officiating priest.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, was attired in a blue tulle dress, ballerina length. It was patterned with stand-up, rolled collar; three-quarter length sleeves having wide cuffs; a skirt featuring deep pleat in the front. Buttons which trimmed the dress were self-covered. Her white hat had pearl and bugle-bead trimming, and a white face veil as worn. White slippers and gloves completed the costume. Her flowers consisted of a hand-bouquet of white roses and pale blue baby's breath.

The bride's sole attendant, Miss Mary VanCleave, of South River, N. J., cousin, wore a pale pink dress, made similar to that of the bride with short sleeves. Her accessories were in navy blue. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of pink rose-buds with navy blue ribbon.

Mr. Thomas J. Mack, brother of the bride, was best man for Mr. Dermody; the usher being Mr. William J. Mack, Jr., another brother. A special bouquet of mixed flowers was placed at the statue of the blessed Mother.

Music was provided by vocalist, Mr. John Artin; and organist, Miss Catherine Keating, Linden street.

Seventy were invited to the reception at the Mack residence.

Attired in a gray dress, navy blue accessories, light blue top, and wearing a white baby orchid corsage, Mrs. Dermody left with the bridegroom for a trip to Washington, D. C., and Williamsburg, Va. Mr. and Mrs. Dermody will occupy a newly-built residence at 246 Glenmore avenue, Mercerville, N. J.

Selection of Mrs. Mack for the wedding ceremony was a navy blue dress, white accessories, and pink corsage. Mrs. Dermody, the bridegroom's mother, made choice of navy blue ensemble, and pink corsage.

Patricia Kentzler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kentzler, Monroe street, had a double celebration commemorating her tenth birthday anniversary on Wednesday. In the afternoon, at the weekly meeting of Patricia's club, "The Seven", she entertained at a party. There was a large cake iced in pink and pink and green baskets of candy, ice cream and soft drinks were served also. The club members attending were: Pamela Johnson, Maryann Kentzler, Joan DiLorenzo, Gail Fannini, Elaine Pica and Winifred Jackson. In the evening, the family celebration was held. Guests included: Mr. and Mrs. John Vasey, Fergusonville; Mrs. Hugo Kentzler, Carol Ann Pluma, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin George, Sr., and son Calvin, Jr., Diane and Joyce Kentzler, Croydon. Cake, ice cream and beverage were served. Each guest received a basket filled with candy. Patricia received gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Houser, Jackson street, and grandson "Larry" Bailey, Bath road, spent May 3-4 in the Pocono mountains. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Horan and children, New York, N. Y., spent the week-end with Mrs. Marie Gratz, Monroe street. Cousins from this area are among those training at Fort Meade, Md. They are Edward J. Cliver, 25, of 313 Brook street, and Irvin R. Wong, Jr., of Bath road, Bristol township. Wong, son of Irvin R. Wong, Sr., Cornwells Heights, was employed as a spot-welder at Kaiser Metal Products, Inc., plant, prior to entering the service. His active service during World War II extended from June, 1947, to December, 1948. Cliver was a mechanic, being employed by Manhattan Soap Co., prior to entering the army.

Among the prizes to be given tonight at the card party sponsored by Anchor Yacht Club Auxiliary in the club house on Pine Grove st., are: set of dishes, man's wallet, flash light, beverage set, pen-knife, waste basket, groceries and numerous other articles. Playing will start at 8:30. Mrs. Henry Streeter is chairman.

Mrs. Julie Farrington and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Austin, Brooklyn, N. Y., were visitors for a few days with Fred Leyden and Mr. and Mrs. Stacy Cullen, Jr., 1011 Pond st.

Install Mrs. Mucklow O. E. S. Worthy Matron

Spring flowers and palms lent beauty to the installation services of Morning Star Chapter No. 395, Order of the Eastern Star, on Saturday afternoon. Chapter members, guests and grand officers, met in special session in Bristol Methodist Sunday School room at three o'clock for the purpose of installing newly-elected officers for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Florence Plummer, right worthy grand conductress and past grand matron, state of Penna., installed all officers. The obligation was given by Mrs. Mildred Reyner, D. D. G. M. of district 25 B.; and assisting were Mrs. Louise Ridge, W. G. Organist; Miss Louise Smoyer, P. M., as W. G. Marshall, and Mrs. Mary Damian as W. G. Chaplain.

The jewel of office for the retiring matron, Mrs. Josephine Beerbower, was presented by Mrs. Lena Broadbridge, P. M., after which she was escorted to the West by Mrs. Ethel O'Dea, P. M. where she was presented to the group of Past Matrons, and presented with a ring from the group.

Mrs. Beerbower was escorted by Miss Louise Smoyer to the stations of her own officers, first being presented with a friendship bracelet, each of her officers adding a charm of remembrance. She then was escorted East where Mrs. Carrie Peterson sang to her "Prayer Perfect".

Mrs. Cordella Mucklow, the newly installed worthy matron, was escorted to the stations of her officers by Mrs. Lillian Kuhn where each, with verse, presented a gift. Finally they were all bound together, making a bouquet. She then was escorted East where Mrs. Adelaide Bekes sang "The Smile of Yesterday".

Among the officers installed are: Mrs. Cordella Mucklow, worthy matron; Mrs. Lillian Kuhn, associate matron; Mrs. Lena Broadbridge, P. M.; secretary, Mrs. Hilda Wunsch, P. M.; treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Foster, conductress; Mrs. Helen Tomlinson, associate conductress; Miss Louise Smoyer, P. M.; trustee for three years, Mrs. Gertrude Warner, Mrs. Thelma Rockhill, Mrs. Edythe Fridinger, Mrs. Gladys Bluff, Mrs. Pearl King, Mrs. Hilda Albright, Mrs. Sarah Campbell, Mrs. Elsie Lawrence, Mrs. Eleanor Lawrence; Color bearers, Mrs. Elizabeth Slater, Mrs. Virginia Ludwig and Mrs. Anne Warner.

There were guests present from many parts of the state who expressed pleasure to be present at this ceremony. The retiring and incoming officers received gifts. When the ceremonies were concluded many members, guests and friends journeyed to Edgely Fire Co. Station. A banquet was served by a caterer, followed with dancing and games to orchestral music.

Shows How Bad Features Of Gambling Offset Gain

"Honor to whom honor is due" was the order of business at the meeting of Newtown Women's Christian Temperance Union at the home of Mrs. Stephen M. Vandegrift, Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. William O. Gantz, vice-president, presiding.

Mrs. William R. Stuckert conducted a service for Mother's day, using illustrations from Holy Writ along with modern madonna portrayals. Miss Elizabeth A. Woodman gave warm tribute to Mrs. Ella Boule and Mrs. Ida Wise Smith, who for so many years championed the white ribbon cause.

The treasurer, Mrs. H. Giffin Miller, was given instructions to pay balance of the crusade fund due the county.

Miss Julia Balderston gave a comprehensive review of various phases of gambling carried on in the county in early days, and showed how people come to realize that the money from the gambling was for off set by the bad features and degenerating effects on the gamblers. "From 1890 to 1927 — race track betting, number rackets, etc., were little carried on but since then the various commercial gambling devices and measures have become wide spread. It is estimated that there is three times as much wagering in various pools, numbers, etc., than in pari-mutual race betting. There are 250 factories in the United States manufacturing slot machines alone. The sweepstakes from Irish races, for instance, sound enormous but nothing is said of the thousands of losers. Herbert Spencer defined gambling as "gain without merit, and gain from another's loss."

She reminded that "Gambling impoverishes homes, lowers character, induces crime and makes a loss of efficiency in factories and business. Recently at a meeting of churchmen of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey, its bishop has declared 'Gambling in any form in support of the Christian Church is in my judgement most dangerous. By no means can I construe the fruits of gambling a holy sacrifice.' opposed the use of bingo for raising church money."

The group next gave bits of good news which they had recently gleaned. One told a bill in Congress to prohibit hard liquor advertisements on radio and television. Many states are taking action to aid the alcoholic and halt the 'teen age drug use.'

On June 12 at the home of Miss Julia Balderston election will be conducted.

Sen. Martin Warns Nation of "Being Pushed Into A Dictatorship"

sacred freedoms that are the foundation of our greatness as a Nation. "We have been through times of financial depression. We have battled against drought and floods. "We have resisted the rising tide of Communism in many parts of the world. "We are building our defensive strength to meet the danger of further Communist aggression. "But, my fellow Pennsylvanians, none of these threats to the future of the American Republic has been more grave or more ominous than the basic issue growing out of the recent seizure of the Nation's steel industry by the President.

"Upon the outcome of that issue depends the kind of government we are to have in the year's ahead. "We have reached a cross-road in our history. Now, more than ever before, we can recognize Benjamin Franklin's reply as the voice of prophecy. "We, in these United States, will have a Republic only so long as we can keep it. Our plan of government will survive only so long as we are faithful to the ideals of those who established it. "It is not my purpose in this talk to discuss the controversy in the steel industry in terms of wages, prices or profits. "But we do have every right to question any attempt by the President, or anyone else, to impose upon this Nation a government that does not derive its powers from the Constitution or from laws enacted by Congress. "We have every right to question any attempt to obstruct or deny the authority of our courts to protect the people against injustice.

"It is our position that the President is accountable only to the country and that the decisions of the President are conclusive. "We say that it is prohibited for the courts to encroach upon the executive authority in a situation such as we have here. "Think it over. The President, by executive directive, had seized certain properties owned by thousands and thousands of stockholders, large and small, without the approval of Congress and without authority under any law. "The Administration insisted it was done under inherent powers of the executive. It was argued that the owners of the property are powerless to go into court and seek an injunction to get their property back. "Now let me read you again from the argument in court. "Mr. Baldrige stated that the Constitution vested all executive power in the President and added, "Insofar as legislative powers are concerned, the Congress has only those powers that are specifically delegated to it. "Judge Pine asked and again I quote: 'So when the sovereign people gave the powers enumerated in the Constitution, it limited Congress, it limited the Judiciary, but it did not limit the Executive?' "To this, Mr. Brainridge replied: 'That is the way we read Article II of the Constitution.' "My fellow Pennsylvanians, for what I believe to be the first time in the history of the United States, the Department of Justice, on behalf of the Administration, declared bluntly that there is no limit on the powers of the President. "Do you believe that? Do you believe such a thing is good for our country? Do you believe it is American? "The only countries in which there is no limit upon the powers of the executive are dictatorships. There was no limit on the power of Hitler in Germany. There is no limit today upon the power of Stalin. "Is the United States heading in the same direction? "Are we being pushed into the dictatorship of a President whose power to act is unlimited? "Do you remember how Stalin once sneered: 'How many divisions does the Pope have?' "Do you want an all-powerful dictator in this country who can sneer, 'How many divisions does the Supreme Court have?' "This is a new and terribly dangerous departure in our government. It is an extension of the power which the executive branch has been taking from the States and the people for 20 years. "As recently as the spring of 1950, the President and his Administration didn't dare to claim such broad inherent powers. "At that time a coal strike was threatened and the President appeared before Congress asking for specific authority to seize the Nation's coal mines. And that is whether or not we are to continue under the form of government contemplated by the Founders of our Republic when they framed the Constitution of the United States. "In other words, whether or not we are to preserve and safeguard the system which has protected the freedom of the individual and has given us the greatest material, cultural and spiritual achievement the world has ever known. "The great question before us today is whether the three branches of our government, legislative, executive and judicial, shall each operate within the broad, clearly defined channels of authority set forth in the Constitution—or whether the executive branch of our government may break loose with the violence of a Mississippi or a Missouri River on a rampage, flooding away the rights of the other two, the rights of the sovereign states and the rights of all our people. Just as these rampaging rivers have swept destructively over farm and city in recent weeks. "My fellow Pennsylvanians, I hope you will listen to this and listen most carefully. Sen. Martin Warns Nation of "Being Pushed Into A Dictatorship" sacred freedoms that are the foundation of our greatness as a Nation. "We have been through times of financial depression. We have battled against drought and floods. "We have resisted the rising tide of Communism in many parts of the world. "We are building our defensive strength to meet the danger of further Communist aggression. "But, my fellow Pennsylvanians, none of these threats to the future of the American Republic has been more grave or more ominous than the basic issue growing out of the recent seizure of the Nation's steel industry by the President.

"Upon the outcome of that issue depends the kind of government we are to have in the year's ahead. "We have reached a cross-road in our history. Now, more than ever before, we can recognize Benjamin Franklin's reply as the voice of prophecy. "We, in these United States, will have a Republic only so long as we can keep it. Our plan of government will survive only so long as we are faithful to the ideals of those who established it. "It is not my purpose in this talk to discuss the controversy in the steel industry in terms of wages, prices or profits. "But we do have every right to question any attempt by the President, or anyone else, to impose upon this Nation a government that does not derive its powers from the Constitution or from laws enacted by Congress. "We have every right to question any attempt to obstruct or deny the authority of our courts to protect the people against injustice.

"It is our position that the President is accountable only to the country and that the decisions of the President are conclusive. "We say that it is prohibited for the courts to encroach upon the executive authority in a situation such as we have here. "Think it over. Yet the damage to freedom of the individual can be much more devastating. "Unfortunately we have been conditioned to the invasion of our rights by 20 years of expanding and concentrating power in the executive branch of the Federal government. "For 20 years we have lived in an atmosphere of creeping Socialism. Now we have taken a great bounding leap toward all-out dictatorship. "When President Truman seized the steel mills under what he called 'the power vested in me by the Constitution' the owners of the various business involved took the government into court in Washington. They challenged the President's authority to take possession of private property without due process of law. "Mr. Holmes Baldrige, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, went before Federal Judge David A. Pine to argue the Administration's case. "Now, I urge that you listen most carefully to some of the things Mr. Baldrige told the court. Such statements had never been made before in an American court. The Assistant Attorney General of the United States said: "It is our position that the President is accountable only to the country and that the decisions of the President are conclusive. "We say that it is prohibited for the courts to encroach upon the executive authority in a situation such as we have here. "Think it over. The President, by executive directive, had seized certain properties owned by thousands and thousands of stockholders, large and small, without the approval of Congress and without authority under any law. "The Administration insisted it was done under inherent powers of the executive. It was argued that the owners of the property are powerless to go into court and seek an injunction to get their property back. "Now let me read you again from the argument in court. "Mr. Baldrige stated that the Constitution vested all executive power in the President and added, "Insofar as legislative powers are concerned, the Congress has only those powers that are specifically delegated to it. "Judge Pine asked and again I quote: 'So when the sovereign people gave the powers enumerated in the Constitution, it limited Congress, it limited the Judiciary, but it did not limit the Executive?' "To this, Mr. Brainridge replied: 'That is the way we read Article II of the Constitution.' "My fellow Pennsylvanians, for what I believe to be the first time in the history of the United States, the Department of Justice, on behalf of the Administration, declared bluntly that there is no limit on the powers of the President. "Do you believe that? Do you believe such a thing is good for our country? Do you believe it is American? "The only countries in which there is no limit upon the powers of the executive are dictatorships. There was no limit on the power of Hitler in Germany. There is no limit today upon the power of Stalin. "Is the United States heading in the same direction? "Are we being pushed into the dictatorship of a President whose power to act is unlimited? "Do you remember how Stalin once sneered: 'How many divisions does the Pope have?' "Do you want an all-powerful dictator in this country who can sneer, 'How many divisions does the Supreme Court have?' "This is a new and terribly dangerous departure in our government. It is an extension of the power which the executive branch has been taking from the States and the people for 20 years. "As recently as the spring of 1950, the President and his Administration didn't dare to claim such broad inherent powers. "At that time a coal strike was threatened and the President appeared before Congress asking for specific authority to seize the Nation's coal mines. "Now, the President's action in seizing the steel plants, if permitted to stand, would put him above the law. He takes the position that he can seize the steel mills, the whether by the President or anyone else. "I want to confine this talk to the fundamental issue involved in the President's order. And that is whether or not we are to continue under the form of government contemplated by the Founders of our Republic when they framed the Constitution of the United States. "In other words, whether or not we are to preserve and safeguard the system which has protected the freedom of the individual and has given us the greatest material, cultural and
